JAPAN PRIME TOPIC AT POTSDAM

£1=11/9!

IN an article in the current issue of the "Journal of the Institute of Bankers in Ireland," entitled "The Post-War Pound," it is pointed out that, taking the Irish pound in September, 1939, as worth 20/-, its present purchasing power is 11/9. Compared with 1914 its value is only 6/9. The corresponding values of the pound in Britain are 13/4 and 8/7 respectively.

MEASURES to defeat Japan form the priority subject of all discussions between President Truman and his British and Soviet Allies at Potsdam, states an A.P. correspondent.

Mr. Churchill yesterday entertained President Truman at luncheon in the lakeside villa which is the British Premier's residence. In a nearby villa, Mr. Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, entertained Mr. Byrnes, the American Secretary of State.

New York radio reported last night that President Truman had returned Generalissimo Stalin's visit of Tuesday.

The "Big Three" conference—still shrouded in secrecy—was last night well under way, and there were indications from the increasing frequency of discussions between the chiefs of State and their Foreign Secretaries that momentous matters are now under consideration, cables Reuter's correspondent at Potsdam.

Mr. Churchill and President Truman lunched together, and remained in conference for an undisclosed period. There was no one else present.

Afterwards, Mr. Churchill and President Truman walked over to Mr. Eden's villa, and met the Foreign Secretaries.

Yesterday afternoon, President Truman and Mr. Byrnes arranged a visit to Generalissimo Stalin, for a second series of talks with Russian statesmen. No further details of this meeting, have, so far, been announced.

American officials in Washington and Moscow have for a long time discouraged speculation as to what rôle the Soviet Union might ultimately take against the power which Generalissimo Stalin singled out last winter as "aggressive" and "the Fascist partner of Hitlerite Germany," says the A.P.

Most American observers in Moscow believe that the Soviet Union will, at the moment its leaders choose, launch a smashing blow against its traditional Asiatic enemies.

The virtual abolition of the non-fraternisation principle throughout Germany on the eve of the "Big Three" conference is regarded in responsible quarters as a concrete pointer to the fact that Germany is a priority item on the agenda.

NO PEACE OFFER

A U.S. State Department spokesman yesterday denied the rumour that Generalissimo Stalin had brought a Japanese peace offer to the "Big Three" meeting.

Heavier Far East Attacks

SOME 1,500 planes, launched from the combined British and American task force operating off the east coast of Honshu, struck the Tokyo area and six adjacent prefectures yesterday, a Tokyo broadcast reported, states the Associated Press.

One force of 500 hit key points in the Kanto Plain, surrounding Tokyo, says Reuter. Yokusuka naval station, on Tokyo Bay, 38 miles south-west of the capital, was pounded by 250 planes, said a Japanese Imperial H.Q. communiqué. Sixteen warships of the joint British-American 3rd Fleet made a half-hour pin-point bombardment of the East Honshu coast, according to another Japanese report. The shelling and the air raid both began at noon (Japanese time), and the raid was still in progress three hours later.

Thus, British forces took part for the second time in 12 hours in the mounting assault on the home islands of Japan. The blows fell while the Japanese were still clearing up wreckage from Tuesday night's naval bombardment of Hitachi, the copper mine city, 60 miles north of Tokyo, in which the battleship King George V. took part.

In the raid on the 80 airfields of the Kanto Plain yesterday, 500 sorties had been counted by the Japanese by 3 p.m., indicating that an attack was in the making on the scale of Tuesday's assault by a force capable of putting 1,500 aircraft into the air, said a Reuter cable from New York.

Three Liberators and 30 Thunderbolts and Mustangs had earlier attacked Southern Kyushu, the most southerly Japanese home island, in sweeps lasting four hours, said the Japanese News Agency. The Kyushu attacks were made by planes from Okinawa and Iwo-Jima, with a handful of Super-Fortresses, while night fighters had scoured the coast of Honshu, north of Tokyo, before dawn.

Latest developments in the Far Eastern land battles are:—

CHINA—Generalissimo Chiang's forces have re-occupied Hankhow, a former U.S. air base, east of the Canton-Hankow railway. The forces closing in on Kweilin, one of the biggest Japanese air bases in south-west China, have advanced to new positions north-west and south of the city.

BURMA — British 14th Army troops, making a reconnaissance in force along the Toungoo-Mawchi escape road towards Siam, ran into heavy gunfire. In an engagement east of the Mandalay-Rangoon road many Japanese jumped over a cliff.

BORNEO — Japanese resistance has slowed down the Australians' advances. In East and North-West Borneo there were minor gains in the Balik-Papan area.

NEW GUINEA—Troops of the 6th Australian divisions have advanced more than half-a-mile down the slopes of the Prince Alexander mountains and are approaching the main Japanese defences.

SOLOMONS—Massed artillery is aiding the land force's advance in Southern Bougainville and is smashing Japanese strongholds across the Mivo river.

The Japanese lined up all the inhabitants of a village just east of Moulmein and massacred them outside their huts, according to reports reaching Pegu.

Red Cross and St. John Brigade Joint Committee

The Irish Red Cross Society and the St. John Ambulance Brigade of Ireland have announced the ratification of the tentative agreement to establish a joint committee to co-ordinate the work of both bodies.

The composition of the joint committee is as follows; Representing the Central Council of the Irish Red Cross Society—Mr. Justice Conor Maguire (chairman), Mrs. Hackett, Mr. J. B. Hamill and Dr. P. J. Gallen; Representing the St. John Ambulance Brigade—Mr. A. J. Connor, Mr. J. P. MacNamara and Dr J. F. Eustace.

Argentine Denial of Hitler Landing

Senor Ameghino, Argentine Foreign Secretary, yesterday denied the reports that Hitler and Eva Braun had landed on the Argentine coast from a U-boat, says a Buenos Aires (Reuter) message.

Plans for Lourdes Pilgrimage

Plans for the annual pilgrimage to the shrine of Lourdes were announced last night, despite the fact that no special transport can be provided as in pre-war years.

Monsignor Choquet, who will be in charge of the pilgrimage, which takes place from August 18th to 22nd, said that the pilgrims will have to get to Lourdes by any means they can provide. None of the 25 trains used before the war will be available.—(A.P.)

Collision Blocks G.N.R. Main Line

A collision between a local passenger train from Greenore and a goods train near Dundalk Railway Station last night blocked the main line for three hours and delayed the services between Dublin and Belfast. No one was injured.

Mr. G. B. Howden, general manager of the G.N.R., who was on the Dublin-Belfast train, watched the clearance operations.

William Joyce May Be An American

COPIES of a document, bearing the seal of Hudson County, New Jersey, which defending counsel said concerned "a man who may or may not be Joyce's father," were mentioned at the resumed hearing of the charge of high treason against William Joyce, at the Old Bailey yesterday.

The trial was postponed until September 11th.

It was necessary, said Mr. Curtis Bennett, defending, that someone should go to the United States to see the original document and the signature, so that evidence on oath might be brough before the Court in admissable form. It might also be necessary for witnesses, who knew the handwriting of Joyce's father, to see the document. The prosecution were ready to help as far as they could to elucidate the position.

"One matter absolutely vital to this case," he commented, "is Joyce's nationality. There is also a record of the birth of William Joyce in New York in 1902."

Mr. Curtis Bennett went on: "My friend is prepared to agree that the documents may be the original, and that the William Joyce mentioned there is the William Joyce we see here this morning. It will be our submission that if Joyce was born in the United States he cannot owe allegiance to the King, and it would be impossible to conduct this man's defence without the documents."

Mr. L. A. Byrne, for the prosecution: "We do not desire to put any obstacles in the way of the defence. It is our desire to render any assistance of which we are capable."

Mr. Justice Charles: "There being no opposition, I am prepared to accede to the request."

£500 Prize For Irish Architects

Mr. John G. Manahan, B.Arch., A.R.I.B.A., 6 Cowper road, Rathgar, and Mr. L. P. Peppard, B.Arch., A.R.I.B.A., 76 Malahide road, Dublin, have been awarded first place, with a premium of £500, in the Dublin Corporation competition for designs for the erection of a new tuberculosis sanatorium at Ballyowen, Lucan, Co. Dublin, it was announced yesterday.

In January, 1944, the Corporation invited competitive designs for the new sanatorium, the competition being open to all qualified architects who were members of the Royal Institute of the Architects of Ireland, the Royal Institute of British Architects, the American Institute of Architects, or registered architects in any of the above countries.

Second place and £350 was won by Nicol, Nicol and Thomas, A.R.I.B.A., in association with Donald G. Walton, A.R.I.B.A., White House, 111 New street, Birmingham. Third place and £250 went to Mr. Donald Del Harrison and Miss Penelope Whiting, 34 Holland Park road, Kensington, London. Fourth place and £150 premium was awarded to the Greenfell Baines Group of Architects, 12-24 Guildhall street, Preston, Lancashire. The adjudicators highly commended the design submitted by Messrs. O'Connor and Aylward, 27 Dawson street, Dublin, and commended the design of Mr. Dermot O'Toole, 69 Fitzwilliam square, Dublin.

The board of assessors appointed by the Corporation to judge the competition were Messrs. Harry Allberry, A.R.I.B.A. (chairman); Vincent Kelly, B.Arch., President, R.I.A.I., F.R.I.B.A.; John Murray Easton, F.R.I.B.A.; Ralph Byrne, F.R.I.A.I., and Dr. A. J. Walsh, M.B., Ch.B., D.P.H., Resident Medical Superintendent, Crooksling Sanatorium, Co. Dublin.

Strike May Close City Cinemas

Some city cinemas may have to close, if a dispute between the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union and some of the Dublin film distributing companies is not settled at to-day's meeting in the Department of Industry and Commerce.

Strike notices have been served on six of the companies whose clerical employees are not members of the union. Four other companies, whose staffs are union members, are expected to oppose the strike order.

The director of one of the distributing companies said that, under the terms of employment, they could not compel their clerical staff to join any union. The union, despite this, would not meet the situation.

Tangier Conference Adjourned

The Paris conference between Britain, France and America, on the restoration of the international status in Tangier has been adjourned until August, writes a P.A. diplomatic correspondent.

The Big Three in Potsdam will consider the Soviet Government's request for representation at the talks, and Paris messages that Britain has agreed to Russian participation are, therefore, inaccurate.

Mr. Charles Peake, British Consul-General in Tangier, has returned to his post, and the experts who went to Paris with him have come back to London.

"We Have No Two Heads To Our State"

—MR. DE VALERA

"IF I am asked are we a Republic, there is only one answer I can give. We are an independent Republic, functioning so far as twenty-six of our counties are concerned," said Mr. de Valera, when replying in the Dail to the debate on the vote for External Affairs.

Replying to General Mulcahy's questions as to whether this country was invited to certain conferences, and if it had refused those invitations, Mr. de Valera replied: "We were not invited, and I want the House to know that as long as I am conducting external affairs I will not humiliate the country by going hat in hand to anybody."

Mr. DE VALERA said:—

It was inevitable when Deputy Dillon asked me certain questions that the debate should take a particular turn. The word, "Republic," has meant a lot for our people in the last quarter of a century, and naturally the question of any reference to it will bring up thoughts and feelings and controversies which are almost certain to entail an exhibition of the differences of opinion that have been in this country during that time — differences of outlook, differences of approach, and so on. Before I come to deal with the matter specifically I would like to deal with one or two points raised by the leader of the Opposition.

"Deputy Mulcahy has asked if there was anything that had happened in recent years that made me think that the position between ourselves and Britain and the States of the British Commonwealth had altered in any way since the day on which a declaration was made on December 29th, 1937, when our Constitution came into force here. Yes; the war. A world war had taken place—a world war which we have been neutral and in which Britain and these other States have participated. Of course, it is said that the States of the British Commonwealth have a right to be neutral. That is true, but when that right for the first time is exercised then it is a somewhat different matter, and obviously when Britain was in the war and we were not the position between Britain and ourselves could not continue exactly as it had been with what had taken place since.

NO INVITATIONS

"If it was a question of one's right, and one's right was accepted without question, then one naturally would expect that no change had taken place. As far as the Government is concerned the right has not been questioned, I admit. But you do not have between Governments the same sort of cordial approach when a position like the present position obtains than that you would have in ordinary time."

He wanted Deputy Mulcahy to realise that the war in Europe was only two months over, as he had to try to impress on Deputies of the House some time ago, and that there was still another world war on in which Britain was engaged, and in which Eire was neutral, and the States of the British Commonwealth were engaged in that war and are holding conferences both on post-war and war questions, and naturally when they were dealing with these questions it would be ridiculous to think that they would have the same contact between the two Governments to-day as they had back before the war began.

"If you want to think that we sent any communication to give rise to any particular controversy I would say," said Mr. de Valera, "no; nothing of that kind has taken place, but a war is taking place, and the States of the British Commonwealth are engaged in it, and we are not. I do not know if that covers all the points. We were asked whether we were invited to certain conferences, and did we refuse, or what. We were not invited, and I want the House of realise that so long as I am conducting external affairs I am not going to humiliate the nation by going with hat-in-hand to anybody."

REPUBLIC STATEMENT

"Deputy Dillon, a few days ago, asked me a question: Was this State a Republic or was it not? I did not have to ransack, as he pretends, the dictionaries or encyclopedias to give him the answer. I gave him the answer I would have given him at any time had he asked that question. If what I say determines the situation, then I said it many times since this Constitution was passed by the Irish people. One of the recent speakers said I had no right to declare a Republic. That word had a certain sense in this country for many years past. A Republic was declared here by our people on the 21st January, 1919. It was a confirmation of a Republic declared in Easter Week, 1916. Declaring a Republic has a certain sense. My statement yesterday was a declaration of a different kind. It was a declaration of a fact which had obtained as a fact in this country since the people enacted the Constitution. There was no concealment about it.

"The suggestion has been made in this debate—why did you not put the name Republic into the Constitution? I did not put it in because I did not want exactly this sort of misrepresenation to go through the country. I did not want people to say, 'You are trying to pretend that you have an independent State for the whole of Ireland when you have not.' I have not been one of those who have talked about a Republic in a doctrinaire way. To me a Republic has always meant the independence of our people, and the form of Government mattered relatively little compared with that. But when our people want us to declare our independence they had naturally to chose their form of Government. There was only one choice left to them, one choice which could be theirs at the time, and that was to declare a republican form of Government. We had no hereditary ruling house left here, if we were disposed to go in that direction from which to chose, and it was quite obvious that, as our struggles had been against the British Crown in the past as representing the power which invaded this country, that when we were going to declare our independence we were not going to declare it in the form of a nation accepting the British Crown.

INDEPENDENT REPUBLIC

"Therefore, the word republic here to us meant something more than merely a form of government. It had not quite the connotation of a form of government, clearly because you could have independent countries with different parties, one chosing one form, such as a monarchical form, and another wishing for a republican form of government. The struggle in this country was not so much for one form of government, as against another, as for the independence of the country, and, so far as I was concerned, I did not want to make any point of our achievement, simply because we had a republican form of government. What I do say is that we have achieved, so far as these 26 counties are concerned, the independence which our people desired. We have the form of government here which our people desire, and that is all I want. But if I am asked the question, 'Are you a Republic, or are you not, there is only one answer I can give, one truthful answer—that is that we are an independent Republic, effectively functioning, so far as 26 of our counties are concerned. That is the truth, the plain truth; it is the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so far as I am concerned.

"I know that, because of the External Relations Act, people can play about and throw dust in the eyes of the people who will never go to the trouble of reading the Constitution completely, or the External Relations Act. We have no two heads to our State here. There is one head here, the head that is elected by the Irish people, and none other, and that is known. For the purposes of the External Relations Act, we do use the head of a number of other States which are grouped together in what is called the British Commonwealth of Nations. As a mark of association, as I have said, with that group, we use the signature, and that is all, of the head of that group for certain specified purposes, restricted purposes, as and when advised by the Government, and on no other occasions.

ELEMENT OF CONFUSION

"There are deputies in the House who have suggested that we should repeal that Act. If any group of people in this country want to make that their programme they can do so, but all they will do, so far as this State is concerned, is to remove an element of confusion. It is, I am admitting, an element of confusion, because the average person is not going to examine exactly its full meaning or anything else. But as far as the freedom and liberty of this State are concerned, they will not have achieved anything, because the authority is here. It is by the authority of this Government that foreign representatives are appointed, that foreign representatives are accredited, and in so far as any other external person comes into it, that person comes in simply and solely as the Statutory agent to mark our association with the States of which he is recognised as King.

"Why have we done this?" said Mr. de Valera. "In pursuance of a steady policy which has been, as far as I am concerned, personally known, I am sure, to the whole Irish people, a policy which was accepted by the full Republican Cabinet of 1919 to 1921, a policy by which we indicated, or were prepared to indicate our readiness to be associated as an independent State with the States comprising the British Commonwealth. That was an external policy to which we have steadily adhered, and, as far as I am concerned, so long as we are accepted on that basis, so long as there is no question of allegiance or anything else, so long as the Declaration that I read out to the House was made, I am prepared to stand by that policy. However, if it is otherwise, if our right to chose our own path and our own way is not accepted, then I certainly would not hesitate in such circumstances to put it to the test of the Irish people as to whether they wanted that to continue or not. We have in this country, as in every other country, people with different political opinions. This country was struggling against the power of a neighbouring country for many centuries. We have in this nation of ours, apart from the ordinary differences which exist among all peoples, a record in feeling of this long struggle for our independence—the struggle between ourselves and Britain. That long contest had brought these two countries into close contact, and perhaps they know each other better than most neighbouring people know each other. Any person here who is trying to settle the affairs of this country, said Mr. de Valera, will have to take account of that feeling.

DREAMING DREAMS

"It is all very well for Deputies to dream dreams. Whoever is Minister for External Affairs in this State will not merely have to dream dreams, but will have to dream how his dreams are to be made come true. I have to do that: that has been my task. For good or ill, I suppose, I have been for a longer period representing this country than anybody at present living. I had to represent this country during what I will call the four glorious years, and I now have had the privilege of representing this country for thirteen years. During all that time I have dreamed dreams like Deputy Dillon or Deputy Larkin or Deputy Norton, or other Deputies, and, if wishing for things would bring them about, then I think the paradise which I would have brought about here would be just as good a one as the paradise which Deputies Dillon or Norton or any other Deputy would have brought about here for our people. But I have had the task to try to make our dreams come true. I do not know how other people will look upon it, but I am glad to see the dream here come true anyhow, the dream of the difference between that Constitution and that, the dream of the difference between the Constitution under which we live to-day and the Constitution which passed out of existence in 1936."

To get the things they wanted to get they had to struggle against a mighty power. We were near the centre of one of the greatest Empires upon the earth. We had to face that Empire in order to win those rights, and we had to do it after that Empire and its Allies had gone out to fight a world war which they said was for the freedom of small nations. After that we had to engage in this struggle. We got, he said, to a certain point, and again force was used to prevent our people from continuing the realisation of their dreams. They had to give up what they had freely, democratically founded. They had to give it up by the threat of force and the use of force. We had to see that ancient nation of ours cut in two by the same power using, of course the differences that existed, undoubtedly, between our people, but if such differences were a justification for carving up an old nation then there was no nation on the earth that could not have been carved up for the same reasons."

He knew it would be said that he was speaking bitterly about Britain. It was not true.

"It will be said that my speech on this matter indicated a hatred of Britain. I say it is not true. I have often realised that if it had been some other country besides Britain that was beside us our history might have been just the same, or, perhaps, worse.

"So long as Britain attempted to impose her will in any form whatever on Ireland, so long would it be impossible for us to have the understanding which I desired. When we got the Agreement in 1938, by which the full sovereignty was established over every inch of the twenty-six counties, I felt that if things went right at all, and if the good-will established then could be allowed to develop, it would not take long till that section of our people here who are opposing our aims towards independence and that section of the British people who also opposed them would realise that the wisest course of all was for this nation to be an independent nation, having whatever form of Government it wanted—that this island as a whole should be recognised as a sovereign independent State. If, as I believe, the aspirations of the majority of our people would not be satisfied with anything less than sovereign independence, how can we reconcile that with the view of the minority, who will say: We will not be satisfied with that sovereign independence unless it is transferred to another country'? Is that half-way house possible?

"Deputy Dillon is like ex-Senator MacDermot, who always imagines that he can get solutions of this kind by going over to satisfy the ideas that prevail in the North.

BELFAST WELCOMES KING AND QUEEN

THE people of Belfast, turned out early and stayed out long to welcome the King and Queen with Princess Elizabeth to their city yesterday.

From eight o'clock in the morning, dressed in their best, they stood in groups choosing vantage points, and by 9.30, when the Royal party entered Belfast from Hillsborough, over 100,000 cheering people had lined the route from the city centre to Stormont, where the King opened Parliament, and later from the City Hall to the Botanic Gardens, where 5,000 war workers were the guests at a garden party.

Flags, ensigns and standards of all shapes and sizes flew from shops and houses. Most of the streets were decked with gaily-coloured bunting.

The day began with a slight drizzle, which had turned into steady rain when, at ten o'clock, the King, Queen and Princess Elizabeth arrived in the Musgrave Channel, where they were to have landed from the cruiser Dido. Shipyard workers in the area did not get a special holiday, but they took time off to perch on roof-tops, cranes and derricks to cheer as the party went by. Along the roadway outside other shipyard workers were massed six feet deep. The King, dressed in naval uniform, arrived in the Royal motor car with the Queen, who was dressed in a suit of ice blue, with hat to match. Keen interest centred in the Princess, who looked grown up, dignified, a little shy, and very serious. She was wearing a long coat of dove grey over a simple frock of the same shade.

The party was accompanied by the Governor and the Duchess of Abercorn, Countess Spenser, Sir Eric Mieville, Captain Sir Harold Campbell, and Wing-Commander Peter Townsend. As the King stepped from the car the shouting and cheering died away. There was silence as the naval guard of honour gave the Royal salute and "God Save the King" was played. A canopy had been erected as a shelter, but the King, Queen and Princess stood in the rain in full view of the crowd.

The Governor presented the Minister of Home Affairs, Sir Thomas Dixon; the Lord Mayor (Sir Crawford McCullagh), the High Sheriff, the Town Clerk, the Lord Mayor's private secretary, and representatives of the Harbour Board and of Messrs. Harland and Wolff.

After the inspection, the Royal party moved off in procession through the streets to Stormont. All along the route cheering crowds were gathered, while hundreds of small children waved miniature Union Jacks. There were people on balconies, on roofs and in windows.

AT STORMONT

At Stormont the main entrance was open for official use for the first time since the beginning of the war. Along the mile long avenue to the building—from which wartime camouflage had been removed for the occasion—British soldiers stood to the present. In the Commons a large crowd eagerly awaited the arrival of the Royal party. Then "Her Royal Highness, Princess Elizabeth," rang through the building, and the Princess appeared, walking quietly, almost hesitantly, to her seat. Behind her were the Duchess of Abercorn, the Countess Spenser and Lady Catherine Seymour. A few minutes later another voice rang through the room, "Pray silence for Their Majesties." Then there was a prolonged fanfare of trumpets as the King and Queen moved into their places. Black Rod summoned the members of the House of Commons to file into the House, and they stood at the bar.

None of the ten Nationalist members was present.

There was a pause, and then the King spoke to the House. He said:

"Members of the Senate and of the House of Commons:

"It is right that, on the occasion of my first visit to this part of my United Kingdom since the end of the war in Europe, I should meet you in Parliament and deliver in person a message to my most loyal subjects of Northern Ireland.

"Now that victory has crowned the first stage of the long and stern struggle against our enemies, the Queen and I are glad to have this opportunity of personally thanking the people of Northern Ireland for the notable contribution they have made towards our hard-won victory.

"My first tribute is due to those members of the fighting services and merchant navy who have, at sea, by land and in the air, greatly endured and greatly dared. Our hearts go out in sympathy to those of you who mourn the sacrifice of gallant lives.

"In every sphere of the national life men and women have shown unflinching readiness to face dangers and to bear hardships and toil. Your homes have not escaped the ravages of war. Your ports, your shipyards, your fields, your factories have been of splendid service to the common cause. From your coast watch and ward were kept over those waters through which ran our vital Atlantic life-line. On your soil the first contingents of American troops landed, and your welcome and hospitality have done much to strengthen our bonds of friendship with the United States.

"The end of warfare in Europe is not the end of the war. Great efforts are still needed from all of us, and I am confident that you in Northern Ireland share the determination to persist till peace is finally won. The Queen and I are deeply touched by the warmth of the loyalty and devotion with which you have received us. We pray that the blessing of Almighty God may attend all your endeavours, now and always, and that under His good providence you may enjoy prosperity and happiness."

The members of the House were then presented to the King and Queen. The Queen took a special interest in the three women members. The Prime Minister, Sir Basil Brooke, called for three cheers for Their Majesties, followed by another cheer for the Princess.

INVESTITURE

The investiture, which followed in the Great Hall, with the colourful uniforms of officers, was exactly on the same lines as the investitures at Buckingham Palace during the war. Soft music was played by a string orchestra. About 200 awards, both Service and civilian, were made, and, at a private investiture, Sir Basil Brooke received the Military Cross conferred on his son, the late Lieutenant Henry Brooke, 10th Hussars.

After the investiture the King and Queen, with the Princess, drove back in procession to the City Hall, where they had luncheon with Sir Crawford McCullagh.

Around the City Hall people were packed 20 to 30 deep. Some of them had been standing there from 9 o'clock in the morning until after one o'clock to catch a short glimpse of the Royal Party.

The rain stopped at lunchtime, and, the afternoon was bright. After luncheon the Royal Party went to the Courts of Justice, where they were received by the Lord Chief Justice in the Great Hall. Once again to the music of a string orchestra, they met public representatives of Northern Ireland. At Queen's University the Royal Party was received by the Marquess of Londonderry.

GARDEN PARTY

For many people of Belfast the big event of the day was the Garden Party in the Botanic Gardens. The idea was to run a garden party precisely on the lines of the Buckingham Palace garden parties, and the guests were 5,000 war workers from shipbuilding, munition and aircraft factories.

When about 30 of the workers had been presented to the King and Queen, the Royal party was to have mingled with the general crowd, but the crowds, milling around to try to get near to the King and Queen, prevented them from getting very far from the Royal enclosure, and the idea had to be abandoned.

Later the Royal party returned to Hillsborough. They are to spend to-day in Londonderry.

LAUNDRY STRIKE SITUATION
Did you know?
THE present featured demand of an extra week's holiday with pay does not by itself appear to be anything unusual—or is it? Could it be the first shot in a vast campaign of unrest that faces industry?

FACTS
Included among the 15 items in the Women Workers' Union Programme are:—

Item 9 40-hour working week for adults.
Item 10 36-hour working week for workers under 18.
Item 11 4 weeks' annual holiday with pay.
Item 12 Break after every three hours' work.

No reasonable person, particularly no employer, withholds better working conditions—if they are equitable and within his ability to provide. It's good for workers—and it's good for business . . . .

but—can it be done? Judge for yourself

CAN LAUNDRIES AFFORD IT?
Since 1939 commodity and operating costs have increased out of all proportion to return—some increases as high as 300%. Bonuses of 18½% have been paid to workers on top of basic rates. In return for these increased costs, Laundries have, under Government control, been allowed to charge a maximum of 15% extra.

CAN CUSTOMERS AFFORD IT?
Higher wages and less work mean extra costs and dearer laundry charges.

CAN WORKERS AFFORD IT?
Higher laundry charges reduce demand. Reduced demand means less workers.

CAN THE COUNTRY AFFORD IT—NOW?
The Government says NO.

SIX RELIABLE PLANTS

By G. O. Sherrard.

THE Royal Horticultural Society of England compiles a list of plants to which they have given an Award of Garden Merit—that is, an award signifying that the plant is of great value in the garden. The plants in this list are not difficult to grow, or rare, but have proved their worth in many gardens. Every gardener could draw up a similar list based on his own experience; here are a few plants I would include in mine:—

Aster Amellus King George.—This, the finest of the early-flowering Amellus group of Michaelmas daisies, has flowers 3 ins. across. The Amellus group as a whole is more suited to small gardens than the tall, late Michaelmas daisies. They can be supported with short twiggy branches, and do not need frequent division, but they relish good feeding.

Salvia Superba.—This plant is now providing a mass of purple colour in the border, which contrasts well with the pink shades of phlox and the yellows of anthemis and helenium. It remains in flower for about five weeks, and needs light staking, as it grows about 2½ft. high. It can be propagated by cuttings of the young shoots in spring.

Penstemon Chester Scarlet.—The whole family of the taller penstemons are admirable border plants, not very long-lived, but easily propagated by cuttings. Chester Scarlet provides a colour that is badly needed. In my experience it is better not to cut penstemons back in winter.

Anthemis tinctoria, Perry's Variety.—All the varieties of A. tinctoria are good for providing yellow colour in the border and for cutting at this time of year. They continue in flower for a long period, but the clumps lose vigour after the second season's flowering, and it is best to grow them from cuttings every year. These can be easily rooted in the open ground in August, and are taken from young shoots which push in numbers from the base of the plant.

Helenium Moerheim Beauty.—This plant might be taken as a representative of a most worthy family, members of which flower from now until October. It is one of the first to open, and provides the rich brown colour that we also get in wallflowers. The Heleniums are true perennials propagated by chopping off pieces of the clump with a spade. They succeed in any soil, provided that they do not get too dry, and are invigorated by a mulch of manure round the clump in early spring.

Rudbeckia Newmanni.—The value of this little plant lies in the late season of its flowering. It is one of the last of the perennials to remain open, and its yellow flowers, with conspicuous black centres, are quite decorative. The other members of the family are, for the most part, very tall, but R. Newmanni only reaches 2ft. in height. It is increased by division.

These six plants are perfectly hardy, and will succeed in any ordinary garden soil given reasonable treatment.

PORTMARNOCK SLANDER ACTION

The President of the High Court yesterday allowed the appeal of Miss Bridget Campion, St. John's, Portmarnock, from the dismissal by the Circuit Court of her slander action against Mrs. Annie Mooney, Rose Cottage, Portmarnock, and gave her £25 damages, with costs of both hearings.

Miss Campion stated that on March 5th, 1944, Mrs. Mooney, in presence of her mother, brother and sister, told her to "go in and bring home the child that she had nursing" for a man whom she named; and that, on March 7th of the same year, Mrs. Mooney, in the presence of her own son and Mrs. Campion, said to her: "You go up to Flanagan's, where you did the robbery. You are dressing yourself out of the till still."

Mrs. Mooney denied that she had used the words alleged, and pleaded that they were not capable of the meaning attributed to them by Miss Campion.

JUDGE AND STATE WITNESSES

In the Circuit Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, before Judge McCarthy, the jury found Samuel Taylor (41), traveller, Westland row, guilty on two counts of the possession of various pieces of cotton canvas, the property of Mrs. Phyllis Smullen, Stamer street, Dublin. He was put back.

The Judge, in his summing-up, said that he would do his share to see that a number of the State witnesses would have their position inquired into by the proper authority in this country, to see how far they might have committed criminal offences.

It was beside the question, the Judge said, that Phyllis Smullen was party to the smuggling into this country of goods from Northern Ireland. Also, it was beside the question that Taylor, in his evidence before the Court, confessed that he was a professional smuggler.

PAY OFFICE ROBBERY CASE ENDING

The concluding stages of the trial of Noel W. Talbot, Connolly avenue, Navan, and Paul Poynton, Parnell street, Dublin, were reached at the Circuit Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday. The men were charged with breaking and entering the pay office of the Great Southern Railways Company at Inchicore on January 7th, 1943, and with breaking and entering 192 Upper Drumcondra road, belonging to Patrick and Marie O'Loughlin, and stealing £130.

Judge Sheehy had not concluded his charge to the jury when the Court adjourned until this morning.

SEARCH FOR MISSING PLANE ABANDONED

The exhaustive search for the Liberator aircraft missing since July 3rd last, when it left Montreal for London, with Government officials returning from the San Francisco Conference, has been abandoned, says the Air Ministry News Service.

Belgian Senate Qualifies King Leopold's Position

THE Belgian Senate yesterday, by 77 votes to 58, adopted the Bill under which King Leopold may resume his constitutional position in Belgium only with the consent of both Houses of Parliament, states Reuter. There were five abstentionists.

M. Paul Henri Spaak, Foreign Minister, explained during the Senate debate why the Government had taken up its present attitude.

"When, in 1940, the King was isolated," he said, "and the Government fled to Britain, it alone was responsible for its actions, since he had decided to stay in Belgium. We had to ask ourselves whether this responsibility for action was constitutional. Going through the Constitution, we found that Article 82 answered our needs. This article provided for the responsibility of the Government should the King be affected with lunacy.

"At that moment the King was not in a state of lunacy," said M. Spaak, "but juridical scruples just then would have brought us nowhere. Since Parliament could not be summoned, we applied only the first sentence of the clause relation to the King's inability to reign, and we did not set up a regency. Nobody ever doubted our good faith, and as soon as Parliament could be summoned we asked it to apply Clause 82. You named Prince Charles as Regent, because the King was in the hands of the enemy."

PREROGATIVES

"At the beginning of May the King was liberated, and then immediately the question arose—does the King automatically resume his powers without legislative action on the part of the Government? The question was not solved, and I realised, and other reasonable men with me, that unless it were we might risk committing acts of illegality. If the theory of the King's automatic resumption of his prerogatives is correct, then we must deduce from this that he resumed them at the very moment he was liberated."

M. Achille Van Acker, the Prime Minister, told the Senate that it was originally his intention to bring the King back to Belgium, but a new factor intervened.

The Belgian Socialist organ, Le Peuple, claimed yesterday to have "irrefutable proof" that King Leopold was taken to Germany the day after the Allied landing in Normandy by his own free will. It alleged that "he who was King" refused to go into hiding in Belgium and escape with Allied help.

The "Republic" Debate
POLITICAL STATUS PUZZLES DEPUTIES

"You cannot do it. Is there anybody here so foolish as to think that if to-morrow we accept the allegiance which some people think goes with the British Commonwealth—I want to make it clear that so far as our relations with the British Commonwealth are concerned, there is no question of any type of allegiance, we made that clear in 1933 and so far as we are concerned there is going to be no retreat from that decision—does anybody think that even if we went back to the position existing before this Government came into office that we were going to get what we want? Does anybody think that even if we went back to that position that we were going to get the people of the North to come in and be satisfied? You know perfectly well that for every step you move towards them they would regard it as a sign that we would move another step, and they would not be satisfied, in my opinion, unless we went back and accepted the old United Kingdom, a common Parliament for the two countries. Is that where we want to go? Clearly it is not, and clearly if there is to be a solution it must be made quite clear to everybody that, as far as I am concerned, and I want to be quite clear on this, that my answer to any attempt to bring us further will also be 'Not an inch.'"

Progress was reported and the House adjourned until 3 p.m. to-day.

When the debate on the Vote for the Department of External Affairs was resumed, Mr. M. DONNELLAN (Farmers) said that partition was the one great political problem remaining to be faced in this country. So long as Ireland was rent in twain, and the Union Jack floated over portion of the land, they would have dissension and trouble among the people.

Mr. W. NORTON (Lab.) said that to him the strange part of this rather belated declaration of their Republican status was the fact that while the Government now took its stand on the fact that the Constitution was Republican in character, the very same Government did not put this Constitution to the people in 1937 as a Republican Constitution. It was rather strange to him that they should have associated with that Republican Constitution a piece of machinery known as the External Relations Act. In 1936 he had suggested that that bill should not be introduced; that when the King of England abdicated they should have pointed out that for seven hundred years they had had a King foisted on this country; that they had never asked for him, and never been consulted about it.

The SPEAKER pointed out that the Deputy could not discuss legislation already enacted.

Mr. NORTON—We declared a Republic yesterday.

Mr. DE VALERA—We did not.

EIRE AND JAPAN

Mr. M. E. DOCKRELL (F.G.) said he had never heard a more Delphic utterance than that of the Taoiseach. He did not yet know whether they were a Republic or a member of the British Commonwealth. He thought that the Taoiseach would have had something to say about Japan. They here had been and were neutral, and yet they had seen the tragic occurrences which happened to Irish priests in the Far East. "I, as an Irishman," Mr. Dockrell said, "cannot sit in this House and let the occasion pass without expressing the deep abhorrence which that had aroused in me."

Mrs. RICE (F.F.)—Is the deputy in order in speaking about priests who were killed in Japan?

The SPEAKER said that Deputy Dockrell was in order.

Mr. DOCKRELL—I, personally, would ask the Taoiseach to break off relations with Japan.

Mr. E. COOGAN (F.G.) said "The first thing I want to ask is are we now deliberately committeed to a policy of isolation? Do we think it in our best interests that we should isolate ourselves, not only from the British Commonwealth, but from the rest of the world, and, incidentally, from the rest of Ireland? Is it is the best interests, therefore, that we should set ourselves up here as an isolated Republican institution? Is that calculated to remove the Border?

"There is no use in anyone standing up here and saying we can remove Partition by a flourish of the pen. It simply cannot be done that way. It should be remembered that it is not a matter that rests beween the Parliaments of Dublin and Belfast, but a matter concerning the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain."

GENERAL SEAN MacEOIN (F.G.) said that they had established a phantom constitutional position. The very moment they elected a President it was one of the signs of a republic. If power coming from the people meant a republic then they had it for a very long time. For some reason, however, Mr. de Valera had decided to get a crown on top of the republic and had called Parliament together to re-establish the monarchy which had, of its own free volition, abdicated. As Deputy Dillon had said, it was rather humiliating that they were neither "in nor out."

"I also should like some information in relation to what has happened in Japan, and in relation to that I want to take this opportunity of saying that some publicity that appeared in the papers a short time ago in relation to certain statements of mine and others in the Mayo Co. Council, was absolutely misconstrued and misrepresented deliberately and intentionally by the Press.

"I want to make it clear that I fully realise the difficulties with which the Taoiseach is confronted and the delicacy of the situation. At the same time, I am sure he is in possession of sufficient information to make investigation and to demand from the Japanese Consul-General here an immediate explanation from the Japanese Government as to how and why Irish citizens met their deaths in Japanese controlled territory."

Mr. B. MAGUIRE (Ind.) said it was not true to state that this country had not participated in the war. How many thousands of Irishmen went from Ireland to join the Allied Forces, he asked. How many thousands of our people living in England and America joined the Allied Forces? Was that not participation in the war? What about the many thousands who went over to work in the danger zone when England's factories were being bombed?

Mr. H. M. DOCKRELL (F.G.) said that he would like the Taoiseach to give them some sort of outlook as to the future of this country in regard to external countries. They were in the peculiar position that they had to export their surplus agricultural produce, and thereby balances were built up in England. He had not heard any one advocating that they should reduce those balances by slaughtering calves. The common-sense proceeding would be to get goods in return for those balances, and to do their neighbours on the other side justice they were prepared to meet this country along those lines. One would have expected the head of the Government to have indicated where they stood in the matter of exports from England. At present most of the people engaged in trade and commerce in this country were at sixes and sevens as to their export relations with England.

Mr. de VALERA then rose to conclude the debate.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE AGAINST SOLDIERS

Private James Hanley (23), a native of Rooskey, Co. Roscommon, and Private Colum McGranaghan (22), a native of Ballybofey, Co. Donegal, appeared before District Justice C. J. Beatty, in Delvin, Westmeath, yesterday, charged with the manslaughter of Esther A. Bannon (21), Rathlevanagh, Multyfarnham, at Portnashangan, three miles from Mullingar, on July 5th. They were also charged with stealing a car, valued at £250, the property of George Mitchell, Ballinabrackey, on the same date, and with conspiracy.

Christopher Reilly, Mullingar, said that he saw two men get into a car outside the Granville Arms Hotel, and drive in the direction of the Longford road. McGranaghan was one of the men.

The accused men were remanded in custody to Mullingar on July 26th.

Drowned in Attempt to Save Servant

MAJOR SCOTT, a well-known Cork yachtsman and a native of Scotland, was drowned in Fenit Harbour, Co. Kerry, yesterday, while attempting to save his servant, Miss Norah Harrington, a native of Castletownbere, Co. Cork, who fell from Major Scott's yacht, Pinta. Miss Harrington managed to scramble aboard.

Major and Mrs. Scott, with their servant, were cruising in the yacht, which put into Fenit about a week ago. About noon yesterday the vessel dragged her anchor during a strong gale, and was in danger of drifting on the rocks. The Fenit lifeboat put out to her assistance and took the yacht in tow. By some mischance Miss Harrington fell overboard, and Major Scott, though over 70 years of age, jumped to her rescue. All efforts by the lifeboat crew to save him were unavailing.

Major Scott retired from the Indian Army in 1922. He had made his home on the yacht in Cork Harbour for many years past.

POTSDAM AND TOKYO

While Allied warships and aircraft batter the coasts of Japan with increasing intensity, Allied statesmen may be discussing her future around the conference table at Potsdam. At the time of the last meeting of the "Big Three," Russia still was bound by pact to Japan, and Marshal Stalin could not be included in any discussion of Far Eastern problems. Russia's repudiation of the pact earlier this year disposes of that difficulty, and the prophets agree that Japan will have a high place on the agenda. In America it is reported that President Truman has gone to the conference with a definition of unconditional surrender for Japan, prepared by the State Department, in his brief-case. Elsewhere, it is said that Marshal Stalin is to act as intermediary to bear an offer of armistice from Tokyo, and, on the other hand, that he is prepared to commit Russia to an early declaration of war against Japan. Chungking, not quite so optimistic, feels that he is likely to offer full Russian aid—in the provision of bases, for instance—short of actual war. The ears of the "Big Three" must be very red; for everybody who is interested in the Far Eastern war is talking about them, and believes that the outcome of their conference cannot be other than momentous. In Australia, it is suggested that the end of the war may come "with dramatic suddenness," and that the Emperor Hirohito is, at this very moment, ready to put his signature to a declaration of unconditional surrender. Certainly, the prospects could not be blacker for Japan. For the past seven days Allied naval forces have been steaming up and down the coast of Japan. Battleships, lying only six miles from the shore of Honshu, the main island of Japan, have hurled their shells into industrial centres as far as fifteen miles inland, while huge forces of carrier-based aircraft have hammered at airfields and factories. Opposition in the air has been slight, though the ships were within fighter-range of Tokyo, and at sea the once proud Japanese Navy has not put in an appearance at all, to protect the inviolable shores of Nippon. Hokkaido, the large northern island, has been cut off almost entirely from Honshu, by the sinking of the train ferries; bombers from Okinawa have begun to carry their raids as far north as Korea. Taken together, these developments have all the appearance of a prelude to invasion. Whether an invasion is contemplated as soon as they suggest is hard to say; but even the prospect of a long delay, under such unrelenting and terrible pressure, cannot be very comforting to the Japanese. When all is taken into account, it appears to be quite probable that the Emperor would welcome the chance of terminating hostilities, and that his so-called "Liberal" advisers would be ready to support him and to throw the fanatical war party to the lions. For his own sacred person, he need have little fear. Probably the victorious Allies would find it essential to maintain him at least in nominal authority, and in recent years he never has enjoyed very much more.

The most important element in the terms which Mr. Truman is said to have brought to Potsdam for discussion is the range of the "occupied" territories which Japan will be required to quit. Certainly they will include all the lands overrun since 1941, and some islands, held by mandate since the Great War, on which America has her eye. They will include Northern China and, presumably, Manchuria. Will Korea, however, which was annexed in 1910, and Formosa, ceded by treaty in 1895 by China, also come under the definition? Will the southern half of Sakhalin Island, just off the coast of Siberia, which was ceded by Russia in 1905, be counted as territory to be sacrificed? Marshal Stalin well might find it attractive, both because of its position and for its valuable resources of oil, coal and timber. In many of these matters he is likely to have a word to say; and it is more than possible that his hand will have been strengthened by agreement with Dr. Soong, Premier of China, in their recent conversations in Moscow. On the one hand, it is necessary, from the Allied point of view, that Manchuria and Korea should be removed from Japan; for these lands provide her at once with the materials which she needs to wage war, and with her footing on the mainland of Asia. On the other hand, it is certain that China will prefer her claim to Manchuria, and, perhaps, to Korea also; and possibly Marshal Stalin would be ready to support the claims, if he were assured that these countries would be allowed to act as independent, democratic States within the Chinese Republic. In Northern China the Communist influence preponderates, and democratic administrations in those territories would be likely to provide Marshal Stalin with the "sympathetic" States which he loves to see upon his borders. There is little affection between Chungking and Moscow, and many of their ideas are, at present, mutually antagonistic; but, through Dr. Soong, they may have decided to present a united front, for their common benefit. It remains to be seen whether Russia will have to go to war with Japan in order to buy her proper share of influence in the settlement of Far Eastern affairs. That she has a more vital interest in the final settlement, in many ways, than either Britain or America, cannot be doubted. Russia is an Eastern as well as a Western Power, Japan and China are her neighbours. Where America and Australia may prefer to keep them at the end of a barge-pole—made of island bases—she is compelled to sleep in the same bed, and must make it comfortable. What is more, the Kremlin may approach Eastern problems in a more understanding spirit than Washington or London. Marshal Stalin has to weld together so many people, of so many diverse races, that no rooted convictions of white supremacy will hamper him in his dealings with peoples of other hues. In the event, war or no war, Russia may prove to be the active agent in the formulation of policy for the East, as she has been for the West.

Brighton Law

The people of Britain are not accustomed to take the law into their own hands. They have no tradition of lynching; they are more patient of constitutional processes, laborious though they may be, than most other nations. It is all the more surprising, then, that the Brighton sweep who has formed an organisation of "Vigilantes" to commandeer homes for those who need them should have received such immediate support. The principle of the "Vigilantes" is that homes ought to go to those who have most need of them; and their practice, when a suitable home is available, is simply to walk in and instal the tenant of their choice. Full rents are paid in all cases. The "Vigilantes" merely claim the right to put in their own nominee. Naturally, they have no legal standing whatever; but the fact that the movement has spread already to London indicates that it possesses sufficient popular backing to give officialdom cause for thought. It has been evident, since the air-raids on Britain reached their peak of destructiveness, that the end of the war and the return of many soldiers to civilian life would see the beginning of an acute housing famine. There is only one cure for that trouble—the immediate provision of more homes, which, according to the Archbishop of Canterbury, needs "action as violent as any war operation." In the meantime, the only alleviation possible is that housing should be controlled, so that vacant houses and flats go to those who have most need of them. The Briton who looks forward to a return to "individual liberty" may not welcome the suggestion that his property should be commandeered, and that "no children" clauses and similar stipulations should be set aside, at the direction of the State. Yet, if one may judge from the action of the "Vigilantes," nothing less will suffice. There is an old saying that the law which cannot be enforced is a bad law. It is equally true that popular action, in default of a law, indicates that a law is necessary. "Food, work and homes" were promised by Mr. Churchill, and the people of Britain appear to be determined to secure the fulfilment of his promise at any cost.

Cruiskeen Lawn

By Myles na gCopaleen

"Why," the Irish Catholic wants to know, "should pageantry be confined to Dublin? Why should we not have a distinctive peasant dress?"

It is of course a very old game—crying down this country. Right well this paper knows that we have. We have in fact gone much further than other countries in this matter of distinctive peasant dress, as well we might—for what other country can boast of an urban as well as a rural peasantry? Our peasants have turned to distinctive dress as a matter of vocational instinct, attiring themselves in costumes which, by their gay incongruity, denote not only the wearer's status as a peasant but also the category of foreign gentleman he seeks to ape. For example:

The University Peasant—General dress nondescript and ill-fitting but ensemble 'relieved' by tie, scarf and tobacco pouch worked in 'club' or 'old boy' colours. This extraordinary get-up is for the purpose of informing the public that he is a university person but . . . who wants to know? And who could possibly mistake him for what he is, matteradamn what he wore?

The Office Peasant—The rig varies with either the peasant's estimate of himself or his official rank but the main costumes are: (a) Threasury pants, black jacket three sizes too small, grey shirt, boots; (b) Wing collar with formal grey tie, black coat, flannel bags, soft hat, boots; (c) new well-fitting lounge suit in grey material, face severely hacked by razor, boots broken and leaking.

It should be noted that in general the Irish peasant wears shoes only with plus fours but then a bowler hat is de rigueur with this outfit. Dress is not, of course, the sole criterion of peasanthood. If you desire to know whether a person who is bedridden is a peasant, all you need do is call to see him at Christmas. If he asks you as a matter of course whether you are going 'home' for Christmas, you know where you are. Some years ago a peasant came on a first visit to Dublin from County Derry and was in due course knocked down by a motor car. The unconscious figure was picked up and taken to hospital. When he woke up next day he found a nurse bending over him gently asking him his name. This he gave.

"And where are you from?" she asked.

This question rather surprised the peasant: having stated his name, surely where he came from was obvious; everybody there knew him.

"Aim frum home," he said.

It must not be assumed that it is a derogation to describe a person as a peasant. The word connotes merely an occupational classification with, of course, ineluctable cultural and other orientations. Humans may be divided into three major classes—i.e., the urban, the rural and the pastoral or nomadic. The urban class is artificial, highly sophisticated, physically degenerate but skilled in the arts and sciences. The gentleman (gentil homme) is exclusively an urban type. Outside parts of Dublin and Belfast, where urbanism threatens to become endemic, there are no gentlemen in Ireland. The peasantry is, however, sturdy, adaptable and respectful without being servile. It might at first appear that minds traditionally occupied with uncomplicated agricultural tasks would be helpless in face of intricate intellectual work such as the solution of administrative or monetary problems. Probably the British were so persuaded when they yielded self-government; possibly they hoped the administration would break down. It is however by no means as simple as that. The application of agricultural techniques to non-agricultural problems has been surprisingly effective. The small farmer who puts down the seeds will wait for months doing nothing, nor will he be surprised if the seeds do not ultimately put forth shoots; yet he does not starve. In thousands of business houses and government offices the same system is adopted. Inanimate papers are accorded gestation and germination periods and however pressing, are locked away for months. And the fact that there has been no disaster appears to establish as a new truth that it is often better to do nothing than a lot of things which are otherwise done.

CORK STREET HOSPITAL

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Encouraged by the enthusiastic attendance of people representing all creeds and classes at our protest meeting, we are preparing a petition for signature by members of the general public. This petition asks for the publication of the Inspector's Report, and, we hope, will be available for signature by the end of the week.

We will advertise where the petition can be signed by individuals. Each copy of the petition will provide space for a number of signatures; and, if any of your readers would like to be supplied with a form or forms, so that they and their friends can sign at home, we will gladly send them a copy if they will send a postcard to the Cork Street Hospital Protest Committee, Berwick House, Rathfarnham, Co. Dublin. Copies will be sent without application to all those who wrote to us as to the holding of a public meeting.

We feel sure that the public who are so anxious and dismayed at the withholding of the L.G.D. Inspector's Report will continue to give us their support, and will take the trouble to add their signatures to this petition. We know that by now it is fully realised that the question at issue extends far beyond the mere dissolution of the present Board, and involves the conduct of the L.G.D.

Numerous sympathisers have suggested that they would like to contribute to the expenses—which they know have been heavy, and may increase—and we have decided to adopt this suggestion. We have accordingly opened an account with the Royal Bank of Ireland, Foster place, Dublin, under the name of "The Cork Street Hospital Protest Fund." Any of our well-wishers who care to do so, can send donations, however large or small, direct to this account. When the need for this fund is over, the accounts will be properly audited by a firm of accountants, and the surplus (if any) handed over to the St. Vincent de Paul Society.—Yours, etc.,

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Lady Abroad

IT will be as well to straighten out some correspondence. Here is a letter from a girl serving with the A.T.S. in Germany. She is ordinarily resident in Ballsbridge, Dublin.

She says: "Now that I am in Germany I find it difficult to believe the people were those we've heard of for so long. They are damned friendly and full of smiles."

She continues: "We are living in a modern little villa house, formerly S.S. married quarters. It is very pretty, with roses round the door, and the garden is full of strawberries, gooseberries, cherries, apple and pear trees, and all kinds of vegetables. The people who lived here were given a few hours to clear out, and lots of stuff was left behind. The people who got here first got quite a bit of loot, but as I brought up the rear I got nothing except some stamps. The country is the most beautiful I have ever seen—hundreds of miles of tree-land. I have just been to a town called Göttingen, near Cassel. I was the first A.T.S. to appear there. The troops broke into cheers when they saw me pass by, and the Yanks nearly fell out of their trucks in amazement. It was very funny."

Comma in the Throat

Another letter is from a citizen who listens to himself very carefully while he is speaking. (This is àpropos of the business about whether you pronounce the "h" in the sentence: "He gave it to his sister.")

This citizen, apparently moved to quite considerable excitement by this small matter, says: "Public speakers, singers, teachers, telephone-users who take special care to be audible, and other classes of persons who do much non-conversational speaking, and people who have absorbed precisionist influences at home or school, sound the 'h' in such circumstances.

Having settled that matter, the citizen brings up an item called "a comma in the throat." He says: "We say 'money order' just as if it were one word—e.g., 'oleograph'—but 'yesterday evening'—well, not quite! To keep the two similar, though not identical, vowel sounds of 'day' and 'eve' distinct, one makes a faint interruption—a comma in the throat, one might call it—between the two words. I find I pronounce 'Anglo-American,' 'Franco-Italian' each as a single word, but that for 'Anglo-Ottoman,' 'Franco-Austrian' I make the little comma in my throat."

Catch Me a Quest

There is a rather sharp difference between us there. As a matter of fact, I never say "Anglo-Ottoman" at all. I can't seem to be able to bring it into conversation.

This interesting letter comes to an end with this observation: "There are at least five nature words which are severely unused in Southern Ireland, except by those who have been at school in England. They are—bracken, moorhen, rook, stoat, woodpigeon. Irish people say—ferns, waterhen, crow, weasel and woodquest."

Frankly speaking, I don't believe that last bit. Distant as the possibility is of anybody saying "Anglo-Ottoman," with a comma in the throat, the chance of anybody saying: "Look at that woodquest" is even more remote. Woodpigeons are woodpigeons, and always will be.

But, of course, it might happen. Until yesterday I never expected to see a sentence reading: "Five nature words are severely unused." The longer you look at that the less you like it.

Romantics and Money

Another letter, with the same fourth-dimensional flavour. "I visited an old lady at Strangford Lough one afternoon last week. She was the daughter of a once famous writer, and as we sat gazing over the lovely stretch of water and chatting about Ireland she suddenly remarked: 'Remember, we in the North are romantics, while you in the South think of nothing but money. Look at our romantic attachment to England, and our love of the Royal Family.'

Politeness and astonishment forbade my voicing the strong dissent I felt, but as I pondered on her remark I felt some misgiving. The prosaic slogan—Sinn Fein, and our unheroic pride in neutrality raised doubts in my mind, and these were not lessened when an Orange band passed by, followed by a rapt crowd of men in the bravery of many coloured sashes."

Quite politely, I wish to state that I do not know what this letter means. There might be a mistake in the last line—it probably ought to read—"a crowd of men wrapped in the bravery of many coloured sashes." But even that would not help a great deal.

I don't know why my correspondence has got so queer.

Music Going Round

We lucky people have a small orchestra, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Horn, in whose house we meet; the rather unpleasant twelve-year-old Viola; and four other instrumentalists whose respective surnames are Harp, Cello, Drum and Flute.

In this lucky little orchestra, the only adult, unmarried members are an engaged couple, who sit together. Neither of them plays a stringed instrument.

Signor Cello sits at one end of the row, and the sexes alternate throughout. No two persons whose surnames begin with H come together.

The instruments are flute, horn, viola, drum, harp, cello and clarinet; but no player bears the name of his, or her, instrument.

The viola player is next to the engaged couple, and next but one to the cellist. The flautist is next to the harpist. The player of the horn is Mrs. Horn's father; but she never did seem to be able to play a wind instrument herself. The clarinet has the middle place, and Viola sits by her father, who is one of those who wield a bow.

In what order do the players sit, and who plays what?

If this puzzle were any good, you ought to have to tell us what we are going to play next; but it will do.

Lawabiding Taken To Win At Powerstown

MANY of the horses that made the journey to Killarney last week will turn out again at Powerstown Park to-day. They contribute largely to an interesting and varied programme.

In point of size, the best race is the maiden hurdle, open to horses trained in either area. Two "invaders" that will make the Southern horses gallop their hardest are Jackrock, from Ruttle's stable, and the four-year-old, Anner Lad.

Both of them will have to beat Ashtown, who, however, carries full penalties, and may not successfully give away over a stone to Jackrock.

Also open to all comers is the handicap steeplechase. I think this race rests between Jack Finlay and Lawabiding. Both of them should dispose of the veterans, Capital Star and Knight of Venosas.

PROMISING SORT

Jack Finlay has fallen in his last three races. That is surprising, for generally he jumps reliably, and first time out this year he ran away with a three-mile 'chase at this course.

Lawabiding, the most promising novice 'chaser in the South last year, has lived up to his reputation this year by making hacks of a representative field of 'chasers at Thurles. I am prepared to overlook his disappointing display at Killarney, and I take him to win.

The "horses for courses" maxim applies, perhaps, more at Clonmel than at any other meeting in Ireland. It applies particularly to the chestnut, Lord Barter, for he has run in the handicap hurdle race here many times, and invariably he runs better here than anywhere else.

Derk, who has found his form again, Milford Bridge, and another course specialist, Shabby, will be far more fancied, but I have an inkling that Lord Barter will beat them all. He has sprung surprises before now.

Two inmates of Vincent O'Brien's stable, Jesse and Topline look the safest bets at the meeting. Very probably they will start at prohibitive prices.

Manton To Be Sold

THE valuable Manton training establishment, where four Derby winners have been trained, is to be sold by private treaty. Messrs. Goddard and Smith, the auctioneers, of King street, St. James's, London, have received instructions from Messrs. Tattersall, the owners, to sell it by private treaty because Mr. Joe Lawson, the trainer, has been ordered by his doctors to take things easily.

Mr. Ernest Needham, partner in the firm of Tattersalls, said yesterday:—"As Mr. Lawson has been told by his doctors to restrict his activities in order to safeguard his health, this means that more of the responsibilities for running this large establishment would fall on us.

"Accordingly we have informed Lord Astor, who is the principal patron of the stable, that it is our wish to confine ourselves to our business of bloodstock auctioneers."

WILL NOT GIVE UP

Mr. Lawson, who trained Court Martial to win this year's 2,000 Guineas for Lord Astor, had a bad illness six years ago and again in the summer of last year. Whatever happens to the Manton establishment, Mr. Lawson does not intend to give up training.

He said yesterday: "My health is better now than it has been for some time. I cannot say until we know who the new owner is whether or not I shall continue at Manton."

Lawson became trainer at Manton in 1928, and horses prepared by him have won more than half-a-million pounds in stake money. There have been reports for some time that Manton was to be sold, and in December, 1943, it was reported that two wealthy racehorse owners were seeking to buy it, the figure of £100,000 being mentioned. The owners then said that they considered such a price was inadequate.

Manton, which is situated in the heart of Wiltshire, comprises about 2,300 acres, and includes a palatial residence, a stud farm, a trainer's house, and stabling for one hundred horses. Major Gerald Deane, who is senior partner in Tattersalls, has stated that before the war the weekly salary list was £245.

Many famous horses, including the Derby winners, Sefton, Lemberg, Gay Crusader and Gainsborough, have been trained there since the first Alec Taylor established it in 1870. He was succeeded by his son, Alec, who when he died two years ago left the record sum for a racehorse trainer of nearly £600,000.

RUNNERS THIS WEEK

Manton will have seven runners at the Salisbury Meeting this week-end. Aldis Lamp, who was spoken of early in the year as Lord Astor's best two-year-old, is to have his first race in the Beaminster Plate (Div. II), to-morrow, with Cliff Richards up.

The other runners are:—To-morrow—1.15, Tricolour (Cliff Richards); Piping Time; 2.45, Dalrimini (Cliff Richards). Saturday—1.15, Fair Ranger (Cliff Richards), Blue Gem; 2.45, Fast and Fair (Cliff Richards).

ELIGIBLE FOR BIG RACE

THE following forty-nine juveniles are eligible to run for the Curragh Nursery Handicap of £1,500, to be run on Saturday, September 22nd. The race is for two-year-olds only that have been placed first, second or third by the judge in a sweepstakes, stakes or plate run in Ireland prior to July 1st.

Hinds Wins Thriller

WITH entries small in both men's and women's events there were no exceptionally good performances in the five Leinster championships decided at the first session of the Leinster Championships Swimming Gala at Blackrock Baths yesterday evening, when E. Heron, D. Corbett and Miss M. Beckett retained their respective titles.

The youths' 100 brought out nine competitors, and was the best race of the night, V. Hinds (Blackrock College) beating P. Feddis (Young Leinster) by a touch in a desperately close finish. Hinds, although impeded by the ropes, retained reasonably good time—63 1-5 seconds.

Miss K. McNally (Curragh), holder of three Irish titles, was unable to compete, owing to illness. Results:—

440 Yards Men's Freestyle—1, D. Corbett (Bray Cove and Army) (holder); 2, R. Case (Clontarf); 3, W. Hawkins (Dublin). 5 mins. 58 1-5 secs. 3 yards; same. 4 competed.

100 Yards Women's Backstroke—1, Miss J. Clegg (Pembroke); 2, Miss N. Sedgwick (Leinster Ladies); 3, Miss A. Magnier (Leinster Ladies). 97 3-5 secs. 1 yard; same. 3 competed.

100 Yards Youths Freestyle—1, V. Hinds (Blackrock College); 2, P. Feddis (Young Leinster); 3, S. Kramm (Blackrock College). Touch; 1 yard. 63 1-5 secs. 9 competed.

220 Yards Women's Freestyle—1, Miss M. Beckett (Pembroke); 2, Miss B. McNally (Curragh); 3, Miss B. Gaff (Curragh). 3 mins. 14 1-5 secs. 2 ft.; 2 yds. 7 competed.

Men's Springboard Diving—1, E. Heron (Sandycove), 183.2 pts.; 2, J. Foley (Sandycove), 110.2 pts.; 3, M. Feddis (Sandycove), 108.2 pts. 5 competed.

Dominican Past swam over in the women's open squadron race, while R. Maltby (Pembroke) and Miss O. Beckett (Pembroke) won the open handicap 50 metres races.

Water Polo—Leinster 5 (Coffey 2, Bowman 2, Conroy 1); Rest 1 (Hastings).

FASTNET RACE

THE Irish Cruising Club's Fastnet race, which started at Crosshaven on Friday night last (8.0), attracted nine boats, and of these only five finished the course. Marama was the first to make Schull, at 10.15 on Saturday morning; Mavis was next, 93 minutes later, with the Cork cutter, Marchwood Maid, just 63 seconds astern; Aideen and Evora followed, the latter 70 minutes behind Marchwood Maid.

When times were corrected on the Royal Ocean Racing Club's system of handicapping the placings and times were:—

Evora (winner), Master O'Hanlon, 10.49-21; Marama (2nd), H. Osterberg, 11-9-18; Marchwood Maid (3rd), M. A. Sullivan, 11-19-32; Mavis, J. B. Kearney, 11-47-8; Aideen, A. W. Mooney, 11-52-40; Colleen, Sheila II, Babette and Tertia retired.

At the outset there was a favourable wind from about E.N.E., but before the Old Head of Kinsale was reached a heavy thunderstorm left the fleet in a flat calm. Later there were light airs from all points, but at dawn a breeze sprang up out of the S.W., and, from that on, there was any amount of wind, so much so that sail had to be reduced considerably. Owing to a mishap prior to the start, Sonia, who had taken 68 hours to make the trip from Dun Laoghaire to Crosshaven, did not start.

KILKENNY TENNIS

H. O'DONGHUE, finalist in Kilkenny Open Championships under 18 last year, is in a favourable position to win the trophy this time. Yesterday's results were:—

Boys, Under 18—G. Rice (Dublin) beat L. B. Belford (Dublin)—6-1, 6-2; J. Mitchell (Kilkenny) beat A. Baggot (Abbeyleix)—6-1, 6-1; H. J. Barniville (Dublin) beat F. Muldowney (Kilkenny)—6-1, 6-0; H. O'Donoghue (Dublin) beat P. Doyle (Tramore)—6-3, 6-2.

BRUCE HOBBS TO TRAIN

Captain Bruce Hobbs, M.C., the youngest jockey ever to win the Grand National, has been appointed private National Hunt trainer to Mr. and Mrs. John Rogerson, of Billingshurst, Sussex, who train on the flat with Perryman at Newmarket.

He will train at Letcombe Regis, not far from his father's training quarters at Lambourn, and one of the horses that will be in his charge is Fascist, a winner under National Hunt Rules in the North last season.

Mrs. Rogerson is a daughter of the late "Solly" Joel. She is a keen sportswoman, and, like her husband, has ridden many point-to-point winners.

U.S. WANTS WOODCOCK

MIKE JACOBS, leading fight promoter in the U.S., said yesterday that he was "definitely interested" in Bruce Woodcock, heavyweight champion of Britain and the Empire since Tuesday night, when he defeated Jack London.

Jacobs said: "If Woodcock decided to come here, we would match him against one of the best heavyweights now available, and see what he can do."

Jacobs added that he had not heard anything from Woodcock's manager, and felt that, if Woodcock wanted to appear in the U.S., the first move should come from Britain. He said both Joe Louis and Billy Conn were still in the Army, and out of the fight picture at present. But he mentioned Joe Baksi, Tami Mauriello and Lee Toma as possible opponents for the Doncaster boxer.

TOOK 5 FOR 1, HIS SIDE LOST

M. H. COPSON, the England fast bowler, took five wickets for only one run in an irresistible spell at Chesterfield yesterday, but his effort failed to bring victory to his side, as Lancashire, in a low-scoring match, beat Derbyshire by 26 runs—92 to 66. Copson's final analysis was six for 25.

POPE BADLY NEEDED

AUSTRALIA has won two of the three Victory Tests, England's only success being in the best match of the lot at Sheffield. Pollard and Wright bowled superbly in an effort to stave off England's latest defeat, but the team required the help of George Pope, and the M.C.C. should see that his request for adequate expenses is met. A possible England team for the fourth Test is: Hutton, Washbrook, Fishlock, Hammond (captain), Robertson, Edrich, Griffith, Pollard Roberts, Wright, Pope.

POLLARD INVITED

R. Pollard, the Lancashire bowler, has been invited to play for England against Australia in the last two "Test" matches. Both at Sheffield and at Lord's he was the best member of the England attack.

DECLARED AND LOST

St. Columba's College, 111 for 5 dec (Knighton-Smith 36, C. J. Little 29 not out); Mr. Oulton's XI, 116 for 7 (M. B. Williams 26, D. Smith 26 not out).

15 MINUTES' PLAY

The match between Phœnix and Merrion, which was continued last night at Phœnix Park, was abandoned after 15 minutes play, during which Merrion, in reply to the Phœnix overnight total of 134, scored 10 runs. The match will be re-played on a date to be fixed.

ARMY ATHLETICS

High light of the 24th Battalion annual sports at the Curragh yesterday was the open three miles, which produced a great race between Gunner Moloney (1st Brigade), Army champion, and the 24th Battalion rivals, Corporal K. Maguire and Private Haughey. Moloney won by 3 yards from Maguire. Earlier in the day Haughey had won the mile.

The long jump (open) was won by Private Fitzgerald, 24th Battalion.

In the confined events Private Bannon had a double, 880 yards and hop, step and jump. Other winners were:—Corporal Martin (100 yards), Corporal McGlynn (220 yards), Private Armstrong (440 yards), Lieut. Heavy (thigh jump), Private Kelly, 24th Battalion (56lbs.), C. Company (relay).

MIDAS AND ST. LEGER

Mr. Jack Jarvis, the trainer of Lord Rosebery's Derby runner-up Midas, says he is very hopeful of getting the horse perfectly fit for the St. Leger.

"He has been suffering from a jar on the hard ground," said Mr. Jarvis, "but he is a fit horse, who does not require a lot of work. He will be given another week's rest." Midas had walking exercise yesterday in the home paddock.

UNLUCKY THIRTEEN?

Gordon Richards has fixed rides in all but one of the fourteen races at this week's two-day meeting at Salisbury. ATHLETIC TEST POSTPONED

Owing to heavy rain, which fell all during the day, the All-Ireland Youths' Athletic Championships, which were to be held at the Mardyke, Cork, last night, have been postponed until to-night. Heats will be run off at 5.30 p.m., and the finals will begin at 7 p.m.

Their Fifth Title

IN almost continuous rain, Clontarf, yesterday evening, at Milltown, beat Castle, 4-1, in the replayed final of the Barton Cup; and, in doing so, won the cup for the fifth time, their other successes having been in 1921, 1926, 1932 and 1938.

The Clontarf team did not include S. Kennedy or C. Garvey. They were in a winning position practically all the way, for they were in the lead at the turn in four of the five matches; but their golf, generally, was nothing like as good as in the home half of the final, several of their team playing below form.

There was one unusual incident in the Fitzpatrick and Phillips v. Quinn and Belton match. Coming to the 17th, one up, the Castle pair pulled out of bounds, and played a second ball. They were then told the first ball was in bounds and the second was picked up. It was then ruled officially that the first ball was out of bounds, and Castle gave up the hole.

The 18th was halved, but Castle won the 19th for their only victory. Results (Clontarf players first:—

F. G. Moran (6) and V. Herlihy (6) bt. N. H. Lambert (4) and J. Barnwell (4)—4 and 3.

F. J. Quinn (6) and J. Belton (8) lost to H. Fitzpatrick (4) and N. Phillips (9) at the 19th.

D. Fitzgerald (6) and F. J. Moran (9) bt. J. Barrett (5) and C. Stevens (8)—5 and 4.

H. A. Murphy (6) and V. Clarke (9) bt. W. Donoghue (6) and J. Lennon (9)—3 and 2.

H. Delaney (9) and A. Byrne (9) bt. H. Williams (9) and P. Sheehan (9)—2 and 1.

The cup was presented to the Clontarf captain, J. Belton, by Mr. Joseph Becker, captain of Milltown.

DALY BEATEN

THE Scotsmen S. Fairweather (Clandeboye) and J. McLachlan (Co. Down) will contest the 36 holes final of the Ulster Professional Golf Championship at Clandeboye to-day.

W. G. Robertson (Castlerock) sprang the big surprise of the competition yesterday when he beat the holder, Fred Daly (Balmoral), by one up in the first round of the match play stages. Daly had headed the list of qualifiers and looked all set to retain his title. Robertson, in turn, was beaten in the semi-final by McLachlan, 1 up.

In the other semi-final, Fairweather, having beaten T. Soye (Carnalea) 4 and 3, won one up against W. J. Clarke (Lisburn), who had earlier disposed of L. Patterson (Donaghadee), 2 and 1.

U.C.D. and Drogheda won their heats by 1½ and 1¾ lengths respectively, but U.C.D.'s time was better by 24 secs. In a thrilling final the Dublin club, hard pressed from the start, pulled ahead about 100 yards from the finish to win by 1½ lengths. Results:—

Where should the sun be when you snap?

TRY SNAPPING with the sun at your side, as in the diagram, instead of directly behind you. Side lighting gives more natural shadow effects and avoids a flat appearance. Be careful though not to let the sun shine into the lens.

BY THE WAY, avoid loading your camera in bright sunlight. Good film is very sensitive—careless loading can easily spoil the spool.

G.N.R. ISSUES IN DEMAND

THERE was no increase in the volume of trading yesterday on the Dublin Stock Exchange, but prices were fairly well maintained. Among Railway issues, Great Northern Guaranteed were in demand, and featured a two-point rise to 72, while the Ordinary stock recovered most of the previous day's loss with a gain of 10s. to 29, at which price it looked rather buyers at the close. C.I.E. Common, in small markets, showed a loss of 5s. at 78¼. Insurance Corporation again received good support, and advanced a further 1s. to 31s.

Local Industrials were exceptionally quiet, and prices showed no decided trend. British Industrials were neglected, and prices generally displayed an easier tendency. Home Funds were slightly more active, and, except for 4 p.c. Land Bonds, which eased a point to 109, price movements usually favoured holders.

TIMOTHY WHITE'S SALES

The combined sales of, and the prescriptions dispensed by, Timothy Whites and Taylors and its subsidiaries reached a record level during the 53 weeks ended December 30, 1944. The accounts of the parent company for the period show that the trading profit, including dividends from subsidiaries, amounts to £566,178, equivalent to a yearly sum of £555,495, by comparison with £538,500 for the previous year.

Company Law Proposals Well Received

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT

MEMBERS of the Stock Exchange found little fault yesterday with the recommendations made by the Cohen Committee on company law amendment in its report. The general view was that the demand for more information in prospectuses and company accounts is justified; and, if embodied in a law, will add to the confidence of investors in joint stock company securities.

CURBING THE "STAGS"

Particular interest was shown in the suggestion that "stagging" should be curbed by making applications for an issue irrevocable for a period of three clear business days after the opening of the lists. The "stag" is one who applies for an issue in the hope of selling any allotment at a premium, and much confusion has been caused in the past by hasty withdrawals on any untoward circumstance threatening the prospect of such a premium. While the proposed rule will not prevent speculative applications, it should, if adopted, force the speculator to accept the full implications of his operation.

Some quiet amusement was evident regarding the proposal that directors should be compelled to retire at 70.

It was suggested that this would mean vacancies in many chairmanships and other seats on Boards. Welcome was given to the proposal that full disclosure should be made of all remuneration received by directors, fees and other payments being separated, and that tax-free fees or salaries should be prohibited.

The New Investment Trust, Ltd., which yesterday announced an increase to 10 p.c. in its final dividend, though small compared with other investment trusts, has a particularly good record. In the past 20 years its dividend has never been below 10 p.c., and for many years was 15 p.c. In the past four years the dividend has been from 12½ to 13 p.c., and now, for last year, it is made up to 14 p.c.

The company's issued capital is the modest one of £250,196, of which half is in Ordinary stock. Its portfolio of investments has a book value of £452,251, and has an actual value substantially in excess of the capital and reserves of the company. The Ordinary stock was recently dealt in at 270.

PAYING OFF ARREARS

Further evidence of the improvement in conditions experienced by London property companies is afforded in announcements made by three companies of payments on account of Preference dividend arrears.

The West London Property Corporation, which owns properties valued at £2,524,983, is bringing payments right up to date on its £500,000 of 5½ p.c. Preference capital following four years' payment in the previous year. No dividend has been paid on its £500,000 of Ordinary capital since 1938.

The Raglan Property Trust, Ltd., which owns properties valued at £425,113, is paying 1½ years of arrears, bringing payment up to September, 1941, and the hope is expressed that further arrears will be paid during the current year.

Central Commercial Properties, Ltd., which owns property valued at £1,421,246, is paying two years' arrears on its £326,000 of 7 p.c. Preference capital, bringing payments up to June, 1944.

These companies own a wide variety of shops, houses and flats in all parts of London, and suffered from enemy action and the widespread evacuation. With the more settled conditions, lettings have recovered and revenues show a general increase.

Greenwood and Batley, Ltd., is a business of engineers and tool-makers, established in 1889. For the sixth year in succession, it is paying a final dividend of 10 p.c., making 15 p.c. for the year. Profits, after providing for E.P.T., totalled £145,583, against £155,105 in the previous year. In pre-war years the company's dividends were limited to from 4 to 5 p.c., and it remains to be seen whether the additional prosperity enjoyed through the war years can be continued. The financial position is sound, net liquid assets totalling, in its last balance-sheet, £515,189. Its issued capital is £448,788, of which £348,390 is in £1 Ordinary shares, quoted around 46s. 6d., at which the return offered, on the basis of the 15 p.c. dividend, is the high one of £6 9s. p.c.

City of London Brewery.—Interim of 3½ p.c. (against 2½ p.c.).

Glagla Tea.—Dividend for the year of 3½ p.c. (against nil).

LONDON TURNS HARDER

A SLIGHTLY harder tendency was perceptible in London Stock Markets yesterday, but this resulted from a very small day's business and appeared to be as much without special significance as the general run of market movements lately. Gilt-edged were hardly changed, but the better investment inquiry evident of late for Colonials made itself felt in higher quotations, and British Rails made further slight progress. Hopes of a Japanese collapse induced fresh speculative buying of Japanese stocks. Foreign Rails sagged.

There was certainly more investment inquiry for leading Industrials, which improved. Kaffirs were disturbed by lower Cape advices for West Wits. Attock and Ultramar stood out for strength in Oils and Rubbers were quiet.

COMPANY NEWS

The Dublin (South) City Market Co.—Gross revenue for the year ended June 30th, 1945, was £10,748, against £10,626 last year. Working charges amounted to £2,373, against £2,350, and net revenue to £8,375, against £8,276. Dividend 4/6 per share (same). Forward £4,474, against £4,424.

Mather and Platt.—Interim of 4 p.c. (same).

Rhodesian Copper and General.—Dividend for the year of 7½ p.c. (same).

WALL STREET AWAITS POTSDAM EVENTS

NEW YORK, Wednesday.—Prices were barely steady at to-day's opening of the Stock Exchange, but commitments were subsequently reinstated in moderately active trading. Assorted recoveries appeared, aided by earnings and dividends, and the list at mid-day was generally steadier, but quiet.

The market relapsed in the afternoon. The desire for a clean slate pending the Potsdam developments remained as a cautionary argument, but the market closed steady.

Sales, totalling 1,450,000 shares, comprised 948 issues, of which 263 advanced, and 510 declined.—(Reuter.)

Death Sentence on Leeds Engineer

Thomas Eric Richardson, 28-year-old engineer, was found guilty at Leeds yesterday of the murder of Dr. Walker Dewar. The jury added a strong recommendation to mercy.

Dewar, who was described during the trial as "over fond of the opposite sex," was found battered to death outside his garage in Beeston road, Leeds, on April 29th.

Ronald Bertram Mauri (32), motor lorry driver, of no fixed home, was, at Uxbridge yesterday, remanded until July 26th, charged with the murder of Vera Guest, aged 18, of Nottingham, who was found strangled in a house at Hillingdon on July 11th.

Mauri, who had wound marks on the right side of his forehead, was closely guarded as he entered the court.

Asked if he had anything to say, Mauri, nervously tapping the dock-rail with his left hand, said: "No, sir; I just ask for legal aid." This was granted, and he left the court.

The Ryefield murder of 14-year-old Daphne Bacon, of Leiston, is still baffling Suffolk police. No weapon has been found, although a large part of the two ryefields at the spot where the girl was found dying and several yards of hedge have been cleared.

Disputes at British Ports

About 1,300 men employed at Cardiff docks ceased work yesterday in support of dockers who were engaged on discharging a cargo of newsprint from Canada. The men engaged for unloading were not satisfied with the rate of pay.

Swansea dockers' strike entered on its sixth day yesterday. It had been arranged to call in soldiers to discharge perishable goods in ships lying idle in the port, but up to noon yesterday the military had not started the work.

A meeting of the 1,000 strikers will be held at the Guildhall to-day, when it is hoped the men will consent to return to work. Only general cargo men are affected. The coal shipping section are carrying on as usual.

Conditions at Glasgow docks were normal again yesterday. The last of the 1,400 non-union dockers who had struck, demanding compensation for wages lost during the main strike, returned to work pending consideration of their claims by the Ministry of War Transport.

Dignan Scheme Debated in Senate

A MOTION welcoming the Most Rev. Dr. Dignan's social security plan and an amendment asking for a detailed Government statement on the implications and cost of the scheme were withdrawn in the Senate yesterday.

The withdrawal followed an assurance by Dr. C. Ward, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Local Government and Public Health, to the effect that the Government was surveying the entire field of social services.

When the motion was introduced by Mr. Luke Duffy, Mr. G. SWEETMAN pointed out that Mr. Sean MacEntee, Minister for Local Government and Public Health, was not in the House, and asked if it was proposed to continue in the Minister's absence.

The DEPUTY CHAIRMAN said that the Minister was aware that the debate was before the House.

Mr. DUFFY said that, from angry comments which had appeared in the newspapers, he took it that the Minister did not wish to be present for the discussion. He (Mr. Duffy) was willing to continue in the absence of the Minister.

He then proceeded with the introduction of his motion, which, welcoming the Dignan proposals, asked the Government to calculate the financial implications of them and submit as soon as possible a White Paper, detailing proposals for carrying into effect the aims expressed in the plan, the general principle of which be approved.

AMENDMENT

Mr. Duffy said that some friends of his had been working on the financial aspect of Dr. Dignan's proposals, and they had come to the conclusion that the cost of the scheme would be, roughly, £20,000,000. At present the principal sources of social security funds were general taxation and rates, and they were already paying £16,500,000 a year for social services.

Mr. G. SWEETMAN, moving an amendment, asking for a detailed statement of the views of the Government upon the other implications involved, as well as the financial cost, said that the Minister, by his absence, was discourteous to the House. If that was the typical attitude the Government proposed to adopt towards the deliberations of the Senate, it was a waste of time for any of them to be trying to contribute in their own tinpot way to the development of the country.

REMARKS WITHDRAWN

Dr. C. Ward then entered the House, and Mr. SWEETMAN said that he was delighted to see him come to take part in the debate, and delighted to see that the business of the House was getting the attention it deserves.

Dr. WARD said he did not know that the House would dispose of the agenda so quickly.

Mr. SWEETMAN said that he withdrew his earlier remarks. He went on to say that Dr. Dignan's proposals were worth considering, especially as there was no other scheme before the House. There was, from Dr. Dignan's proposals, a prima facie case that there could be very substantial saving by re-organisation of at least one of our social services.

Mr. T. C. KINGSMILL MOORE said that the House should press for the fullest possible investigation of the figures of Dr. Dignan's plan.

Mr. J. G. DOUGLAS said that he thought that the Government had made a mistake in their attitude towards Dr. Dignan's report. It would have been wiser to see what it would cost and how it could be put into effect. They would be very foolish if they thought they could treat the demand of the people for social security in a cynical way.

Mr. L. O'DEA said that the motion was introduced for some other than the apparent reason, and that its supporters were not sincere.

Mr. L. O BUACHALLA asked what proposals had these people to offer for the overhauling of the economic structure of the State. He was satisfied with the assurance given by the Taoiseach in the Dail in regard to the matter.

Mr. P. O MAILLE said that it would be a very good thing if there were a general understanding among members of that House as to what sum the country could contribute to improve social services. He hoped that the Government would soon produce a scheme that would have the support of all parties and the country generally.

DR. WARD'S REPLY

Dr. WARD, in reply, said that the views expressed would be of considerable benefit to the Government when it was considering the reorganisation of the social services. They had to address themselves, however, to the problem of how these schemes and reforms could be financed, and how the financial burden could be borne by the people.

Having stated that he would consider a full discussion of the matter inopportune, Dr. Ward said that he thought it was reasonable to suggest to Senator Duffy that the motion might not be pressed upon the House until the Government had a full opportunity of surveying the entire field. When that had been done, the Government would either submit to the House a scheme of reform of social services and tell them why Dr. Dignan's scheme should not be accepted, or why the Irish Medical Association's scheme should not be accepted, and so on. He said he thought that this examination would be completed within the next couple of months, and then there could be a full discussion of the matter.

On the assurance of the Parliamentary Secretary, the resolution and amendment were withdrawn.

AGRICULTURAL WAGES

The final stages of the Unemployment Insurance Bill (1945) were passed.

The Committee stage of the Court Officers Bill (1945) was passed, and the Report stage was fixed for to-day.

The Juries Bill passed the Committee and final stages.

The second stage of the Agricultural Wages (Amendment) Bill was then taken, and passed.

Dr. RYAN, Minister for Agriculture, said that 95 to 97 per cent. of the farmers of the country were willing to comply with the law in regard to payments.

Mr. P. F. BAXTER submitted that the whole approach to the regulating of the relations between employers and employees on the land was totally unsatisfactory. Machinery should be set up to determine what should be the minimum wage for a worker.

Discussing the Local Authorities (Acceptance of Gifts) Bill, 1945, second stage, Mr. ERSKINE CHILDERS, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Local Government and Public Health, referred to the gifts made to Carlow Urban Council by Mr. George Bernard Shaw. Mr. Childers said that the Government were delighted that Mr. Shaw, who had done more to arouse the English social conscience than any other living Irishman, was so closely associated with this change in their local government organisation. The second stage was passed, and the remaining stages were fixed for next week.

The House rose until 3 p.m. to-day.

Count Joins Army.—Count Alfred de Marigny, who went to Canada two years ago after his acquittal at Nassau, Bahamas, on a charge of having murdered his father-in-law, enlisted last week in the Canadian Army. He volunteered for service in the Pacific.

COMPANY MEETING

Albert Phillips (Ireland), Ltd.

THE eighth ordinary general meeting of the shareholders of Albert Phillips (Ireland), Limited, was held at the Shelbourne Hotel, Dublin, on Wednesday, July 18th, 1945, at 3 p.m.

In moving the adoption of the report and accounts, the Chairman (Mr. Walter Phillips) said:—

It is two years since I had the pleasure of addressing you. Mr. Briscoe kindly took the chair last year owing to my enforced absence, due to travelling restrictions which prevented me from coming to Dublin. Mr. Briscoe reminded you that the reason for our stoppage was the impossibility of obtaining material supplies, and that this had been the case at the date of the accounts for two years and four months. At the date of our present accounts, December 31st, 1944, a year later, we were much in the same situation, but as the war by all the signs and portents was reaching its inevitable conclusion the time had come to double our efforts with the object of obtaining the materials necessary for the resumption of our activities at the earliest possible moment.

RAW MATERIAL HOPES

With the end of hostilities in Europe early last May, your directors watched the position with ever-increasing care, and at the moment they considered proper they brought to bear all the pressure they could to induce the authorities to relax restrictions which for long had borne so hardly upon us. I believe these efforts are now about to bear fruit, and I ask you to continue for a while longer that patience which you have so wisely exercised during three years of stress.

The authorities on the other side, whence alone our material supplies are obtainable, have now offered sympathetic consideration to our oft repeated applications. That, you will appreciate, is a great advance upon previous replies, but you will also be quite sure that I cannot, upon this basis, make promises, the fulfilment of which I could not guarantee, but I do regard the situation as hopeful, and look forward to our meeting next year to inform you that the company's works have recommenced production and distribution of the goods which for year after year in the past have brought prosperity to the company and resulting favourable balances.

THE YEAR'S ACCOUNTS

You will have seen from the accounts that the net loss for the year amounts to £405. This is made up by sundry unavoidable expenses, plus amounts brought in as leasehold sinking fund, £87, and depreciation of plant and machinery, £26, making a total of £1,069, and after deducting sundry receipts amounting to £664. Setting off this loss of £405 against the credit balance at December 31st, 1943, namely £835, the latter is thereby reduced to £430. Besides this reduced credit balance, it is hardly necessary to point out that the reserves which had been created in the last year of trading, namely reserve for income tax, £678, and reserve for discounts, £358, are not required, and should, if we thought proper, be added to the balance of profit and loss account. The same remarks apply as regards the reserve for doubtful debts, namely £210, but, as regards this last, it would only be prudent, I think, to leave it intact, having regard to future trading.

Although I have not previously alluded to it, I feel able now to mention that my company in Birmingham has for some time taken upon itself to provide for certain key employees who would otherwise have been a burden upon you, and thus has been able during these last years to keep down the expenses to a bearable level. In addition to this, your directors and managers have foregone entirely the fees to which they have been entitled, and, additionally, our auditors have been willing to forego a substantial part of their fees.

The report and accounts were adopted.

Supplies May Not Be Normal For Five Years

It may be four or five years before all commodities will be freely available, Mr. Sean Lemass, Minister for Supplies, told members of the Executive Committee of the Federation of Irish Wholesale Associations, at a luncheon given by Mr. Sean Clarke, president of the association, in the Dolphin Hotel, yesterday.

The regulation of production and export of many essential commodities by international authorities appeared to be contemplated, even after the actual period of scarcity had ended, he said. More active supervision of foreign trade also seemed to be part of the future policy of many Governments, and might prevent the restoration of trade methods which were considered most suitable in pre-war years.

Changes such as these would occasion co-operation of the methods and the channels by which external supplies were brought to this country before the war. Such developments would inevitably create new problems, and would have to be organised in associations such as the federation.

Dr. J. Ryan, Minister for Agriculture, said that this year they would have the greatest crops of wheat and sugar that the country had ever known.

Even though more eggs were being consumed at home, they had this year an export trade in eggs greater than at any time in the last three years. The output in butter was the best for four years.

An improvement in bacon supplies was in sight.

Disposal of Army Lorries Queried

The debate on the Estimate for the Office of the Minister for Finance was resumed yesterday in the Dail.

Mr. JAMES DILLON (Ind.) raised the question of the sale by the Department of Defence of used Army lorries direct to Coras Iompair Eireann, and said that this was a proceeding which, if allowed to develop, would strike at the very roots of honest administration in the country. The Department of Finance had laid down a rule that if Government property of any sort was to be disposed of, it should be put up to public auction and anyone could buy it. Recently, however, the Department of Defence decided to dispose of surplus lorries and to offer them direct to C.I.E. for a sum fixed by three independent valuers.

He strongly warned the House that if they approved of this transaction the day would yet come when conspiracies would be set on foot to corrupt public servants and to purchase arbitrators appointed to determine the value of the goods to be sold by the Government.

Mr. AIKEN, Minister for Finance, said he agreed that the sale of Army lorries direct to C.I.E. at a price assessed by three independent valuers was a very bad precedent, but in this particular case the number of lorries available for transport of essential goods was limited, and the Government had decided to make these surplus lorries available to C.I.E. If they were put up to public auction the prices realised would be exorbitant. The decision to offer the lorries to C.I.E. need not be regarded as a precedent, and he would not like to see it become a practice.

On the question of arbitration for civil servants Mr. AIKEN said he did not think that the Government should be asked to go any further until they had had an opportunity of seeing how the scheme now in operation worked out. Civil servants had not been treated badly in the past, and he did not contend that there should not be adjustments. It was true that civil servants had not the right to strike, but it should be borne in mind that, unlike a private employer who could not carry out the award of an arbitrator, the Government could not go out of business.

Replying to Mr. W. Davin (Lab.), the MINISTER said that he did not think this was a suitable time to change their attitude towards the Standstill Order with regard to pensions.

The Vote was agreed to.
